Population health, or public health, focuses on preventing, diagnosing, and treating an entire population of people rather than one person at a time. The Population and Public Health Program (PPH) informs and advises policy and practice on emerging and priority population health issues. We focus on prevention approaches that aim to enhance the health of British Columbians where they live, learn, work and play. Abstract. Multiple and diverse preventive strategies in clinical and community settings are necessary to improve health. This paper: Introduces evidence-based recommendations from the U.S. Preventive Services Task Force (USPSTF) sponsored by AHRQ and the Community Task Force (CTF) sponsored by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. DOWNLOAD. INTRODUCTION. Although the term Population Health Management (PHM) has become something of a buzzword over the past few years, the concept is often unclearly defined and even less well understood.
