Update: February 27th, 2019 ---This week's update takes us back to the late 1980s when prolific starship designer Bernard Guignard put together a collection of 18 starships that he and a friend 'drew' on a college main frame using the Mc Auto Unigraphics software. He titled the collection Class 1 Starships of the Line. Each of the 18 ships contain three views, along with detailed specifications. Allan R. Baker had hoped to develop closer ties with the Otis Elevator Company – who were manufacturing machinery for Baker customers in America during the war years – but now saw that it would be more to Baker's advantage to have their own factory in the USA (see also Baker Perkins and Werner & Pfleiderer - The European Limited Partnership).
